NEW YORK YOUNG UN 2025 CONF. B

New York Young UN - Conference B The Ambassador of the Future is the conference dedicated to high school students which will take place in New York City

- 5000 Students
- 8 March - 16 March 2025
- High school
- New York

The New York Young UN Ambassador of the Future training program is a conference that will take place in New York City from March 8 to March 16, 2025 (9 Days – Conference B, Session I) and is the largest diplomatic simulation of the UN model in the World with the participation of 5000 high school students from over 100 countries and 6 continents.

The students who participate in the project will study and discuss the issues of the international political agenda by wearing the role of ambassadors and diplomats. In carrying out this role, the delegates carry out the typical activities of diplomacy: they give speeches, prepare draft resolutions, negotiate with allies and adversaries, resolve conflicts and learn to move within the Committees by adopting the rules of procedure of the United Nations (UN).

The UN Ambassador of the Future model provides a real training and educational experience for the students, they learn to cultivate excellent communication and decision-making skills by exploiting the power of compromise, consensus and international cooperation for effective negotiations, through the representation of a State assigned in a specific insertion commission.

The Conference offers participants the opportunity to truly embrace the mindset of a diplomat in a unique setting: the hall of the United Nations General Assembly, where the world's most important leaders meet, in New York, United States.

N.B: The use of United Nations space is always subjected to the availability and approval of the UN. The United Nations reserves its own priorities that understandably may take precedence over ours. The only requirement for access to the program (Delegate Program) is knowledge of the English language.
